THE loss of the steamer Ferntower has led to some discussion in the Straits Times as to marine surveying, overloading, and Chinese shipowners. Mr. Gon Guan-Loo, the owner of the Ferniower, in a letter replying to some remarks made in reference to the case, mentions amongst other things that the vessel was only insured for thirty per cent, of her value. This may be so, but it does not dispose of the charge of overloading. We believe the insurance offices looked on the Ferntower as a bad risk, and there might perhaps have been some difficulty in getting her insured up to the amount the owner might have stated as her full value. That, however, is by the way. That there is a good deal of overloading is undoubted, but we will not make the assumption that vessels are sent to sea with the definite purpose of their being lost from this cause in order that the owners may obtain the insurance money. It may be taken for granted, we think, that the insurance offices are careful to protect thomselves against fraud of this description by limiting the amount they underwrite on wessels where there is a remote possibility of anything of the kind being attempted. The real cause of the overloading is that owners and charterers are often prepared to run big risks for the sake of large profits. Beyond a certain point every puckage of cargo taken on board represents so much clear profit, and the temptation to run verv closely or even overstep the line of safety is great. It is not only Chinese shipowners who yield to this temptation; the divous- to the French steamer Obok being aground there sions on overloading which have taken place and blocking up the way. in England from time to time have shown that British shipowners, too, are guilty. In this particular part of the world, however, it the Roy. A. G. Goldsmith, Seamen's Chaplain. happens that the line of business in which. The Bethel flag will be hoisted. overloading is most likely to occur, namely, the grain trade from Sugon, is almost entirely the Belgian Consulates in Japan, China, and the in the hands of Chinese. Rice shipments from the north are usually made by steamers of the regularly established lines which have the advantage of better supervision than some of the "tramps," as they are termed, which are chartered from time to time for the Saigon trade. A "Chinese shipowner writing to our Straits contemporary, practically admits that overloading is carried on, when he says that :- "In the interests of Russia." humanity many Chinese-owned vessels generally reject boatloads of cargo offered to them on finding they have already been overladen." The use of the words "generally" and "many" shows that sometimes additional boatloads of cargo under such circum. to learn that the troops acquitted themselves in stances are not rejected. The only provision of law touching the matter here, beyond the general one making it a misdemeanour to take or send an unseaworthy ship to sea, is that when a vessel, being in up from Hongkong to conscorate it on its formaany port of the colony, is, by reason of overloading or improper leading, untit to proceed to sea, she may be provisionally detained for the purpose of being surveyed. This only applies to ressels leaving the colony ; not to overladen vessels which may arrive in the colony. Whether there is any or what law at Saigon with reference to overladen ships putting to sea we are not aware, but there certainly seems to be some need for the Valse exercise of supervision over vessels leaving Selection...... If there be no regulation there it might be well to deal with clear cases of overloading on their arrival here. situation. A case is reported from Singapore in which the enginesh of the steamer Ban Yong Seng would not get up steam at Sourabaya on account of her being overloaded. The Consul at that port ordered a survey, and the sprveyor decided that there was no ground for the engineers' complaint, When the steamer arrived at Singapore the engineers were taken before the Master-Attendant, who said that there was no local law against deck loading, but he could not force the crew to go to sea in a vessel so laden. He therefore advised the engineers and work out their term of agreement. They accepted the latter alternative. The general feeling, of course, is that if one man will not go to sea in a vessel another will, and so masters and officers are practically belpless label. EXTRACT. WOOD WOOL.

For some time past attention has been directed to a very interesting product, consisting of extremly thin and slender shavings for packing. It is known by the name of "wood wool." This product was first introduced into France as a packing material. It weighs about 40 or 50 per cent. less than the materials generally used for such a purpose. Its beautiful appearance, its fineness, and its extreme cleaness, at once brought it into fawour with shippers. It was afterwards found that the material was well adapted for the manufacture of mattresses, for litter for cat tle, for the filtration of liquids, and for stuffing horsecollars, &c., the most suitable species of wood being selected for each of these purposes. Its elasticity cause it to be considered as the best material for bedding after horsebair, and it is even perferable to any other substance when it is derived from resinous wood, since it does not then absorb moisture. In workshops wood wool is tending to replace cotton waste for cleaning machinery, and it has likewise found an application on the rolling stock of railways for lubficating car-axles. While it has the same property which cotton waste has of absorb ing oil, it costs ten times less than that waterial. Its use is said to be rapidly growing in Austria and Germany, and also in France. -Iron.

THE REAL "OVER PRESSURE."

" An Englishwoman Abroad " sends to an evening contemporary the following remarks. suggested by the recent Presidential address at the British Medical Association :- " It is a pity that Dr. Withers-Moore cannot travel round Europe, and especially in Austria, and discover the over-pressure that really exists, and is doing more to destroy the health and beauty of the human race than study of any kind can by any possibility ever do. I write from an Austrian bath, filled with the upper classes from Vienna. Among the women would be difficult to discover o whose body is of a natural shape, and the greater number are simply monstrous in their deformity. To show how these waists of eighteen inches can be acquired only by years of 'over-pressure, let me relate a conversation on hourd a Danube steamer with a lady from Pest, who was travelling home with two pretty and charming daughters. I had been so struck by their beauty and natural grace that I plucked—up-courage to compliment—thegirls. The mother flushed with pleasure, and replied in her profity English, 'Ah!do you think so? I long fear I never do my duty by my daughters, but as children then, see you, they would not, like the others. But to have a fine "taille" it must be builded up from the beginning; that cannot come known in England; and would it not be well than in any other city." for our doctors to attack real evils, the bad effects of which are daily before their even, instend of tilting at shadows? THE CRIMINAL CLASSES OF

The Globe, in an article on Criminal Berlin, says :- "The criminal classes of Berlin appear to form a separate caste, pretty as they lo in London, almost as clearly marked off from the merely poverty-stricken as from the well-to-do portion of society. They have their special haunts, and these are frequently low class of public house. Drinking places of one denomination or another abound in Berlin; there is one, in fact, to every 200 pursons. The lower class of thieves frequent by preference, not the beer-drinking saloon; but the brandy shop. There are two dozen public houses, perfectly well known, whose custom is drawn exclusively from the criminal classes; why they are not suppressed is a little difficult to understand. They are all underground dwellings, and hang out no sign. Hereat night thioves and receivers of rates. stolon goods are wont to congregate, to enjoy themselves on the fruits of past predatory achievements, or to plan new enterprises for the future.
